

The Bible Museum Is Looking Forward to Open on Wednesday

Friday's announcement from the Oslo City Council that museums can finally open their doors to the public was well received by the many museums of the city. Employees and volunteers at the Nordic Bible Museum have rallied, and are ready to welcome visitors as early as Wednesday, May 26th, at 12 pm.

Throughout this spring and summer, both the city's residents and tourists can view the numerous cultural treasures that reside in the only Bible museum in the Nordic countries. After many months of locked doors, the museum in the city center reopens to the public with fresh enthusiasm.

The Bible Museum also hopes that school classes wish to utilize the opportunity of free guided tours as the summer holiday approaches.